should have met with the approbation of citizens generally, appears to have excited some opposition from the people who distrust the ability of the civil government to preserve the peace. It is very doubtful if there was ever a moment in Seattle when a resort to military government was necessary. The practice of calling extraordinary powers into operation without good reason is a dangerous one.

The New York Herald has reached bottom facts when it says: "Two things are absolutely certain. First, that the democrats will win if judged by the merits of their policy; second, that as sure as death and taxes they will be whipped off the field unless they stand shoulder to shoulder, and follow leaders who know how to lead. In the matter of tricks, games, deals and the expenditure of money they are no match for their opponents. There is a remnant of conscience left in their party, while the democrats have put theirs in pickle as a useless obstacle to present success, but well enough as a curiosity for the next generation to gaze upon."

The New York World has discovered a new Cole Younger, a horseflesh and general bad man, who was drowned last week, and whom it proceeds to credit to Montana. The World is respectfully informed that Montana has no Cole Younger, and never had one, and that persons of the general character of the World's hero have never been known to dwell in this territory. There is an old saying which admirably fits the case of such people when once they reach the mountain territory.

The disputations editor of the St. Louis Republic has entered the lists in defense of that verbal labyrinthry which is the staple of the party press. It is not to be said of the editor that he maintains his position with the ability of a majah and the stubbornness of a true southern gentleman.

James William's change of the court dress back to the fashions of 1700 leads one of the leading social organs of London to consider the influence of the Prince of Wales on fashions, and the conclusion is that it is very small.

In Holland an unmarried woman always takes flight from her home and the married woman the left. At a church wedding the bride enters the edifice on the right arm of the groom and goes out on the left side of her husband.

The conditions of the Italian peasantry in many parts of the country is far from satisfactory, and one of the most serious consequences is the increase of the population in the large towns without any corresponding development of employment.

The case of leprosy in Dublin has brought light on a similar one in the County Clare. The patient is a woman, and she is supported by a charitable lady, who has built a small house for her.

A several other cases of leprosy in Mexico, Los Angeles, and the city of San Francisco. The disease is said to be spreading in the latter city.

At Johnston a man who was imprisoned in the State of New York for a crime, and who had been in the State for several years, was released.

The sufferings and persecutions which I have been just tapped for dropsy the next eighth time, the doctors removing several ounces of water from my chest. He is the most remarkable case of dropsy I have ever seen.

Dr. Zetche Kanderah is the peculiar name of a Chinese doctor who claims to have discovered a poison which will change a man's or woman's complexion. A blonde may become a brunette, or vice versa, at pleasure. Kanderah asserts that his mixture is infallible.
